Patterson v. Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners et al.	24-C-22-000477	Motion pending	Plaintiffs—two Baltimore City Residents—filed a taxpayer standing action against the Baltimore City Board of School Commissioners and added the MCCB as a Defendant. Plaintiffs list a litany of issues with City Schools, but primarily focus on an issue with over-reported attendance figures based on media reports related to the Augusta Fells Save school in West Baltimore. The substance of the claim is that City Schools are deliberately inflating the attendance figures to try and secure more funding for the School System, as funding is tied to enrollment. MCCB is filed its MTD on the basis that 1) MCCB is not a proper defendant as it has now control or even involvement in the day to day operations at the school system, and 2) Plaintiffs don't meet the threshold for taxpayer standing.	None	Injunctive and declaratory relief to require the School System to comply with its own policies regarding keeping attendance records and enjoin the City from funding the schools until City Schools does so.

Bradford v. MSBE	24-C-94-340058	City's motion for summary judgment granted. Appeal pending	This litigation arises out of a 1994 lawsuit filed by the City's Board of School Commissioners—then a City agency—to require the Maryland State Board of Education ("MSBE") to provide more funding to City Schools. The lawsuit resulted in a Consent Decree in 1997 whereby City Schools was restructured into an independent agency and the State was required to provide more funding. In 2019, class plaintiffs and City Schools filed a petition for additional relief, and in the process, MSBE filed a motion requiring MCCB's participation as a third-party defendant. No clear action has actually been filed against the City, but the City remains in the case today as a third party defendant. Should the plaintiffs win a substantial judgment against MSBE, MCCB anticipates that MSBE will attempt to recover some amount of losses from MCCB.	Unstated monetary relief	None	Plaintiffs' appeal pending
